It's back to school for county students

As traditionally happens the week after Labour Day, children across the county have been gearing up for another year of school.

And the schools for their part have been gearing up to meet them.

Though enrolment in Highlands schools is more or less the same as it has been in past years, some schools report minor fluctuations in the number of students attending this year.

But the most important change is a doubling in the amount of time devoted to French lessons at some levels. Children from grades 4 to 8 will now receive 40 minutes of French a day, whereas in previous years students had to wait until the grade 5 level to start the language, and then they had it for only 20 minutes per day.

The reason for the increase, says Stuart Baker, the director of education for Haliburton County, is because the Province of Ontario has notified school boards that it will soon require students to have taken more hours of French before they can take the final exam in that subject at the end of high school.

A check of county schools reveals that enrolment at Minden's Archie Stouffer Elementary School is up slightly from last year's level of 448 at 455 this year. Most of the increase can be attributed to a dramatic rise in the number of children at the kindergarten level. "This year," says principal MacKay Brydon, "we have 66 children divided into 3 classes. Usually we have between 40 and 50 students and only 2 classes."

Archie Stouffer also has two new teachers this year: Mrs. Welsh, who previously taught grade one at Victoria School in Haliburton, will be taking the extra kindergarten class, and Miss Claus, from the Dorset School, will also be there.

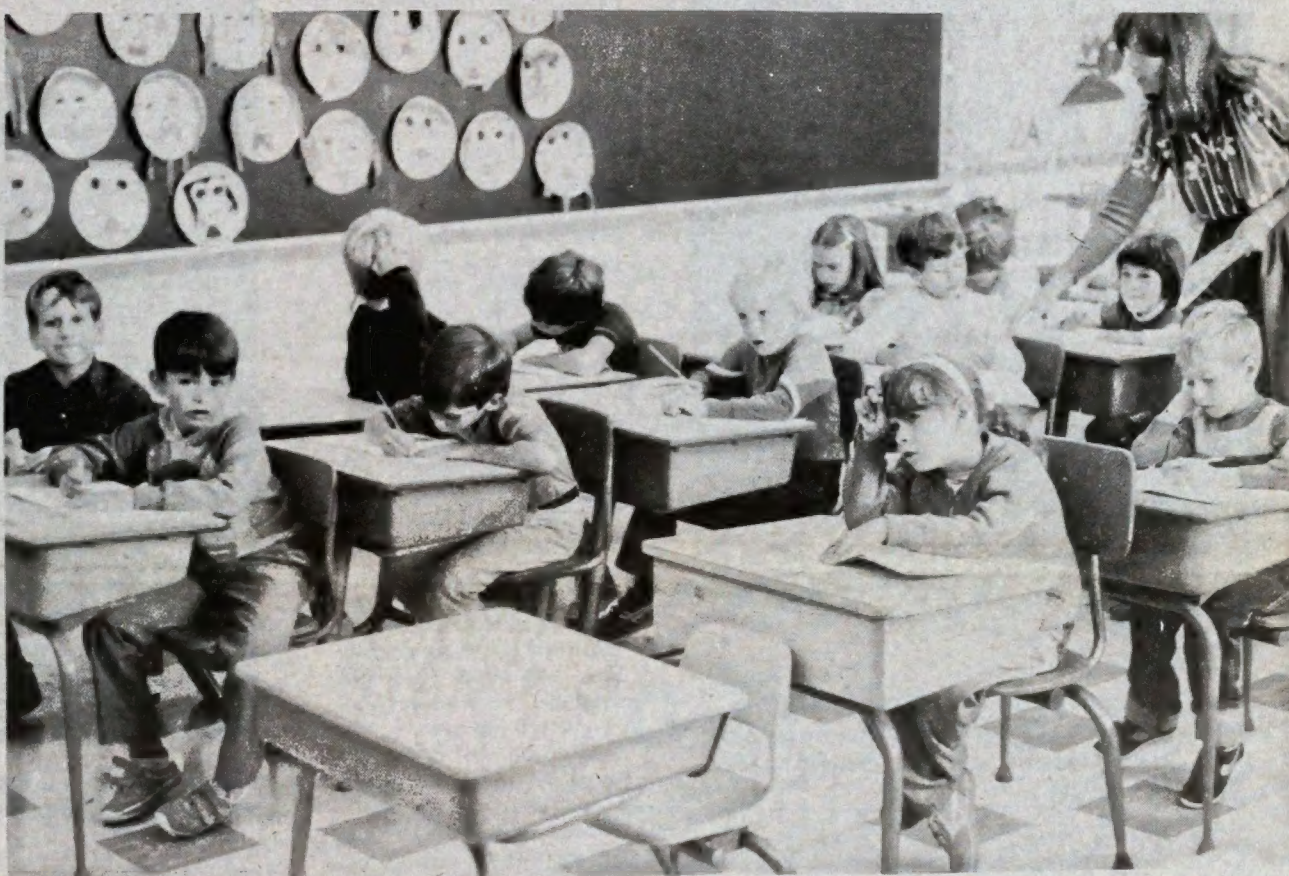

"But other than that, it'll be business as usual at Archie Stouffer," adds Mr. Brydon.

Enrolment is down at J.D. Hodgson Elementary School, says principal Doug Devolin, "by about 15 or 20 students - it's too early yet to put any exact figures to the drop." This year 381 students are attending classes at the school. Last year there were 400 students.

At Haliburton Highlands Secondary School enrolment is the same, says principal Andy Hemphill, as it was last year. There are about 610 students registered this term.

Last year's co-op education program, in which students received credit for both class work and time put in with an employer, proved so successful, says Mr. Hemphill, that the school has decided to expand the program and extend it to all students who would like to try it.

Also, adds Mr. Hemphill, the school has just acquired 14 new micro-chip computers, all designed and built to specifications of the Ministry of Education. "They'll be used for a wide variety of senior secretarial and office procedures courses," he explains.

The new computers have many possible uses. At first they will be used primarily to teach word processing, but soon, explains Mr. Hemphill, students will be using them for courses on everything from inventory and bookkeeping to drafting.

At Cardiff Public School, says principal E. Ryan, there have been virtually no changes from last year. Enrolment stands at 82, the same as last year, and there are no new teachers. As with other schools across the county, Cardiff Public School will require students from the grade 4 level on to take 40 minutes of French instruction a day.

Since one grade level in Dorset was closed at the end of the last term, the Dorset

Public School goes only to grade 3 and has 12 students. With the old school, Dorset could take children up to the level of grade 4.

Enrolment at Gooderham Public School stands at 25 this year, exactly the same as last year, says school principal Christine Bailey.

The school goes from kindergarten to grade 4. An extra teacher will be brought in for 40 minutes a day to teach French to the grade 4 students.

One problem Gooderham parents are facing is that the school board has given notice that their school may be closed next September.

"It's expensive to run a school with only 25 students," explains Mrs. Bailey. If no one can come up with figures to indicate that enrolment will rise in the near future, she adds, Gooderham children may soon be going to school in Haliburton.

Ruth Gorrie, principal of the Victoria Street Public School in Haliburton, says she's happy with the way the term is shaping up.

Mrs. Gorrie is particularly pleased with the school's class for developmentally handicapped students which is now going into its third year.

A new part-time teacher has been taken on at Wilberforce Public School to cope with increased enrolment there. The school, which includes classes from kindergarten to grade 4, has 66 students this year. Last year there were 56 students. Principal, Charles Hughes says he's "very pleased about that."

Donation made to Minden hospital

For the past few years Frank Cowan, a cottager on Kushog Lake, has been periodically making use of the Minden Hospital.

Mr. Cowan liked the treatment he received there. In fact he liked it so much that earlier this summer he donated to the hospital a $10,000 Electrocardiogram.

"He just approached us one day," said hospital staff physician Dr. Lodenquai, "and asked us what we needed. Naturally, we were astounded."

The new ECG machine, explained Dr. Lodenquai, is state-of-the-art. With it, doctors at the Minden Hospital will be able to detect a wide range of heart problems, from irregular pumping to disease.

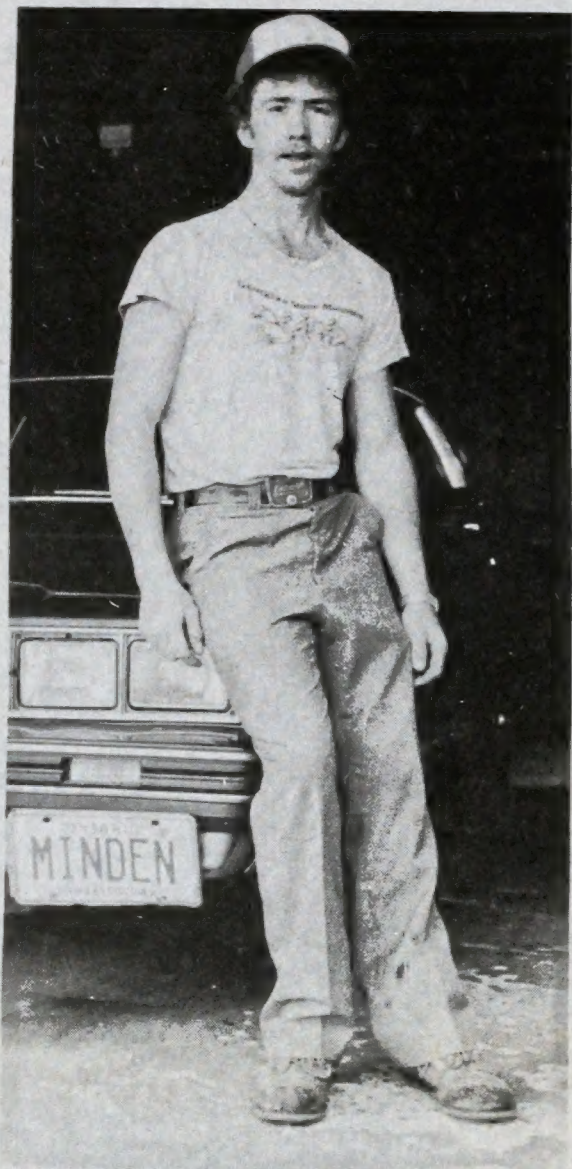

Pets must now be vaccinated

The increased incidents of rabies throughout this area has prompted provincial authorities to enact a regulation requiring all domestic pets to be vaccinated against the disease.

To assist in this effort, a number of vaccination clinics are being held in the area in the coming weeks. The schedule of the clinic include: September 13 and 20 at the Minden Animal Clinic on Bobcaygeon Road north of the village and the Gull River Veterinary Clinic on Highway 35, one kilometre north of Cobocok; on September 13 only at the Haliburton Village Fire Hall and September 20 only at the Fire Hall in Wilberforce. All clinics will be run from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. The charge is $5.00 per animal.

There's no question where this car comes from, the licence plate tells it all. Rob Crowe is seen with his brother's vehicle bearing the "MINDEN" plate.

Almost three and a half years after their introduction, personalized licence plates for cars remain a rarity in Minden and its surroundings.

With the help of Reg Booth, Minden's licencing officer, The Times tracked down four locals who have taken the step of obtaining personalized plates. New plates can't change the way people drive, but recognition is still a major payoff.

Chris Coneybeare, whose plate holds only the last five letters of his surname, was given it by his girlfriend.

According to its owner, patriotism made Steve Crowe of Kawartha Dairy choose his distinctive MINDEN licence plate, and it has proven an effective way for him to meet fellow townspeople as far away as the United States.

His mother, Opal, chose to publicize the family business - although it took some thought to condense "Kawartha Dairy" into six letters. The end result was "K DAIRY".

Wendy Gambell, of Gambell's Antiques, was so surprised at winning one hundred dollars at a Rotary draw last fall that she went out to buy a personalized plate right away. She was also surprised that her plate idea, "ANTEEK", was still available "because so many people sell old cars."

You can still get a personalized plate with seven letters or less if you probe your imagination. Only one holder in Ontario is allowed to have a particular word at

Firemen called back

Minden firemen had to make a return visit to the scene of a blaze Thursday evening in Snowdon Township.

Fire Chief Don Booth reports that the department was called to the residence of Jalmari Kassalainen on the Scott's Dam Road near the Sunny Rock Lodge. A steam bath on the property was burning.

The firemen brought the blaze under control and extinguished the flames. Leaving instructions with the owner to watch for the re-emergence of the flames, the fire fighters returned to Minden after two hours.

The department was called back to the scene at about 4 a.m. Friday to discover that the Kassalainen building had re-ignited and caught an adjacent building on the property of J. Heiskanen of Toronto on fire as well. When the firemen arrived on the scene both structures were destroyed.

The loss was estimated at $10,000. An electrical fault was suspected to be the cause of the fire.

Acid rain report

The following report on the acidity of local precipitation events was recorded at the Ontario Ministry of Environment testing station, in Dorset and prepared by Environment Canada. There was one only rainfall recorded in the last reporting period:

- a rainfall of 32 mm was reported on September 4. The rain had a pH of 4.1 and was traced from the states of Kentucky and Ohio and southern Ontario before reaching the Highlands.

Environmental damage is usually observed in sensitive areas regularly receiving precipitation with pH less than 4.7. Readings of 4.0 pH or less are considered dangerous. The lower the reading, the more acidic the precipitation.

year old Brian Dean. He was most recently employed as a special education teacher.

The man was arrested September 5 and was held in Lindsay jail. He was released from custody September 8 on his own recognizance, with the understanding that he would appear in court October 6 in Lindsay.

According to the police, the three victims are all minors and at the time of the alleged offences, were students at the Cardiff school. All are male.

Constable Al Bibby is continuing the investigation into the matter.

Theft

An investigation is continuing into the theft of two outboard motors from boats on Grass Lake near West Guilford. The motors were removed during the evening of September 6.

Constable Bob Wood is the investigating officer.

Occurrences

During the past week, officers with the Minden detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police investigated 11 thefts, three break and enters, two liquor violations, two impaired drivers, issued two, 12 hour suspensions to drivers who had consumed some alcohol but who were not impaired, and investigated 12 motor vehicle accidents, which resulted in injuries to ten individuals.

Council offers beach for Ingoldsby

A stretch of shoreline adjacent to the recently closed marine allowance at Pine Point is to be made into a suitable swimming area. Anson, Hindon and Minden Reeve Sinc Nesbitt told a group of concerned citizens at the council meeting on Tuesday, "We're going to create a proper place for people to swim," he said. "You just give us the time."

Mr. Nesbitt explained about the recent closure that only the shoreline allowance was involved. "All my council has done is sell the marine allowance," he said. The Hill family, who are buying the strip of land, already own most of the area known as Pine Point.

But the shore on either side of the point is still public land.

Linda Schrader, one of the concerned citizens, then told council that when she and a group of other citizens parked close to a place they thought they could swim near Pine Point on a public road allowance, they were told to leave by nearby property owners.

Mrs. Schrader said the tone of the property owners was hostile.

"People will always try to bluff you," Mr. Nesbitt replied. "Anywhere the road allowance reaches the water - then you can swim. And nobody can tell you not to."

Concern was expressed about the availability of parking in the area and the problem it could create for

Valuable suggestions

Recommendations contained in an interim report of a provincial committee studying the municipal electoral process should be welcomed by voters across Ontario. A peek at what the committee has been doing over the past few months was offered at the recent meeting of the Association of Municipalities of Ontario in Toronto. Some of the most appealing highlights include:

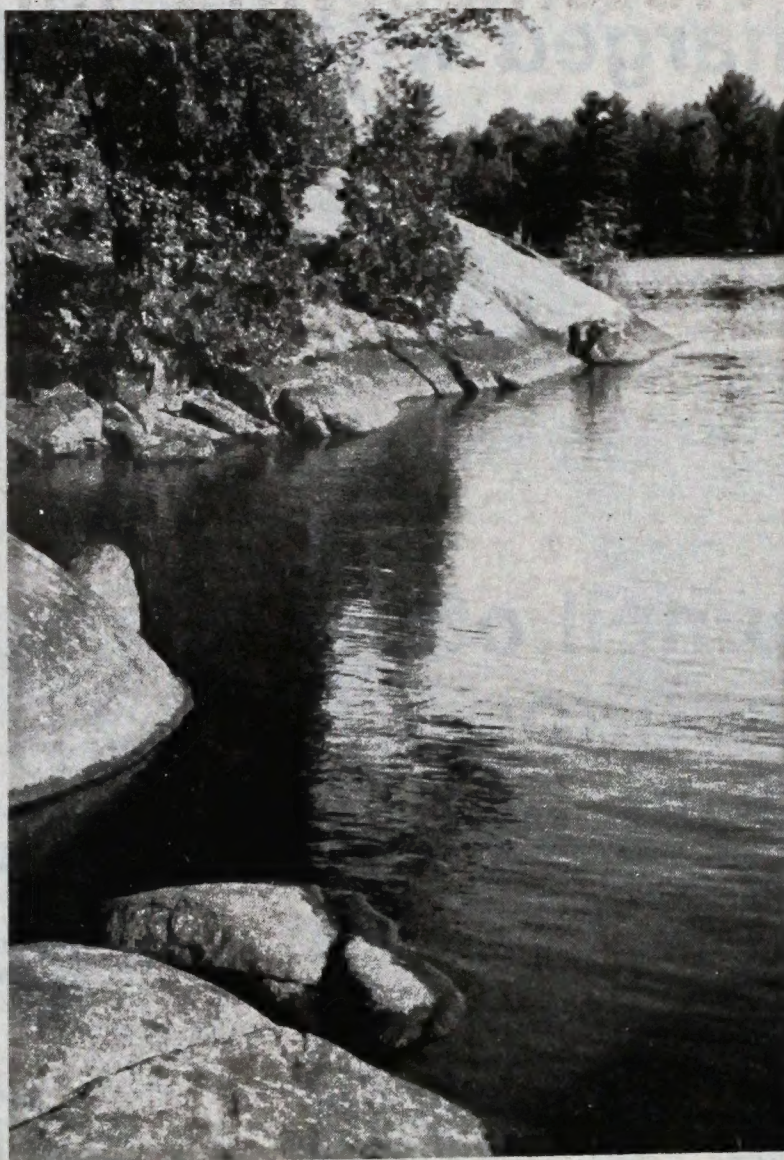

- moving the date of the election back to mid-October. The change would mean that most voters would not have to trudge through the slush of a November snowstorm to reach the polls. The earlier date, and consequent potential for better driving conditions, would appeal to seasonal residents. They have long complained that the questionable weather conditions of November have presented a deterrent to their participation in the election process.

- campaign expenses be limited, based on a formula related to the number of electors. The problem of a high powered, cash-fed campaign, has not existed here, but it could be in the future. As the most accessible level of government involvement for the general population, participation should not be limited to those with the most to spend. Limits will ensure that all candidates will have a reasonable opportunity to reach the voters.

- candidates be required to disclose the source of their campaign funds. The purpose being to ensure that one individual or group does not have undue influence over a politician. Individuals in the community should be encouraged to provide financial support for the candidate of their choice. It is an important way to be a part of our democratic traditions and ensures that one individual, the candidate, is not left with a huge debt following a campaign.

- campaign contributions be tax deductible, with the municipality or school board picking up the tab. A sensible extension of the previous point and a good way to encourage participation. An upper limit on contributions by individuals should also be established.

The provincial committee, we believe, has made an excellent start on a process which is long overdue. Hopefully the ideas offered above will form a part of the group's final recommendations.

As a consumer and taxpayer in this area for many years, I am disappointed in the decision to open so many non-essential stores on Sundays. I see this as another step to demoralize our society by making the dollar a god.

Beautiful Haliburton Highlands should not be swayed by commercialism. I came here to escape this and get back to a more basic way of life.

"We have 12 lakes in this municipality. Where do you go if you want to swim? ... Twelve Mile Lake. Where do you swim on Minden Lake? Bob Lake? Mountain Lake? Soyers Lake? Horse-shoe Lake? Kashagawigamog Lake? ..."

Vern Graham quoted by the Minden Times at municipal candidates meeting October 26, 1985.

Almost 11 months have passed since this question was posed. We have a new council and 2 less beaches.

Where do you go if you want to swim at 12 Mile Lake? The beach at Carnarvon has a fence around it. Where do you go if you want to swim at Ingoldsbay? Our new council sold that beach.

We have an abundance of lakes but a diminishing supply of good public beaches. The economy of this area depends on tourism and tourists like good beaches. So do most residents and their children. Why is it, then, our council doesn't initiate some leadership to develop and protect our beaches?

A couple of weeks ago, a woman wrote to you who used to run a small store at Halls Lake (Doreen Stinson-Burcombe, July 23, 1986) and she was recalling years there. We were acquainted with the gentleman who owned the store previous to her and her husband, at a time when times were quite different.

I'm in my 70's now and I first started going to Halls Lake when I was 9. My uncle, father and mother and I rented the 2-storey cottage across from where the Post Office was (at the beginning of the trail to Kennisiss). The cottage had a picket fence all around it.

We rented it for 3 years, and, at that time "Grandma" Welch used to sell us pails of milk which we picked up at her house.

After a few years, we rented first Mrs. Smith's boat-house and then her cottage. Next, we rented "Sorento". Bill Moles's cottage and then as I was grown and working and engaged, my boyfriend and I started staying at Hillcrest Lodge with Amy "Ma" Cooper.

Those years, even after we married, were some of the best vacations we ever had.

There was a dance-hall "Ma" Cooper had next door, and Billy Cooper used to play the fiddle for square-dancing. Every now and again he'd have to lower the lanterns and pump them up again.

Then "Slim" Brandon started bringing his 4-piece band and we danced to their music. He was (a few years ago) Reeve of Minden. He had such blonde curly hair in those days.

On several evenings each fall, clouds of 'little bugs' appear about dusk. Some of us see them swirling and rising into the air from bushes and wildflowers. To others, they're the 'blips' streaming through headlight beams to splatter on the windshield. Mysteriously, these gatherings form about sunset - especially near bridges or rivers - and disappear by midnight. By morning, the only reminders are the thousands smeared on windshields and car hoods, where their dried carcasses seem as tenacious as crazy glue.

They're ants - to the surprise of those who look closely - hundreds of thousands of flying ants.

This annual emergence is no coincidence. It's an essential part of the life cycle, crucial to both health and reproduction of these tiny but important insects.

All ants (Ontario has dozens of species) share a similar colonial structure, vaguely reminiscent of bees. Each colony is built around a 'queen' and has a series of different castes - soldiers, which defend the colony, and various workers which dig tunnels, act as garbage-men to clean the colony, or gather food. Others tend the (microscopic) eggs, (grub-like) larvae, and (egg-like) pupae. A colony may reach 6,000,000 members, all the progeny of 1 queen - who may live 12 - 15 years.

The colonies reproduce themselves almost as though a colony was an individual. Each year - usually in 1 or 2 batches (June or August), the queen of each colony lays special eggs which will be specially fed and tended. These will not become ordinary workers, but will instead develop into winged males and females, capable of reproduction.

These progeny 'hatch' from their cocoon-like pupae over several days and patiently await the precise weather conditions which cue emergence. High barometric pressure indicates a high-pressure air mass - with no rain (which would knock them from the sky) with little wind (which would impede flight and blow them all over) and with sunny weather followed by warm evenings. (Ants are cold-blooded and slow down in cold air.)

Cued, the ants begin to pour from the colonies' tunnels into the afternoon warmth, climbing onto shrubbery and other vegetation. Here they mull impatiently, like bees on a honey-comb.

About dusk, these ants take off by the hundreds of thousands, to fly in search of a mate. Using the identical weather ensures that the ants from a multitude of colonies emerge simultane-

Dominion Hotel: serving through the years

by John Greenwood

At something over 140 years of age, the Dominion Hotel is perhaps the oldest building in Minden. Like all venerable structures, it has a certain musty quality to it; the stained wood walls inside have darkened with age and the timbers aren't as straight as they used to be. Which is just the way a good bar should be.

But if you really want to learn something about the establishment, it's best to talk to Sis. After five years as a barmaid, bouncer, proprietor and part owner, she knows her business and her patrons inside out.

She can tell when a customer is out of sorts - maybe his girlfriend has left him or his car has broken down - and she's also good at making sure everyone enjoys himself. Aggressive customers as well are taken in her stride.

Like, for instance, a couple of weeks ago, when a disgruntled man came at her with a roofing axe. That time, actually, she escaped out the side door, but on other "special occasions" when the opponent isn't so well armed, she's been known to acquit herself honourably with an old table leg. "The police told me always to aim at the feet and hands - never at the face." Usually she remembers.

Dark and studded with strange signs, like 'Do Not Disturb - Meeting In Motion', the bar in the Dominion stretches a long way back. It could accomodate an army. But generally, it's only the front room that's used.

The decor reflects the tastes of the people who drink there, and that includes everybody from construction workers and summer camp counsellors, to odd nomadic individuals like Danny, a bag man from Toronto who'll explain to anyone willing to listen about being pursued through the streets of Rome by a band of Iroquois.

In short, you can meet just about anybody there.

Tonight the crowd is small. At 9 p.m. on a Wednesday, most people are at home. About six regulars are sitting at a table in front of the bar. Sis is explaining about the building:

"This hotel," she says, "is the oldest building in Minden. This and the Clergy House."

Arthur, a man in the building trades, remembers it a bit differently. "But it wasn't always a bar here, it used to be a livery stable."

"No, the livery stable was upstairs," says Delbert at the far end of the table.

"Then how'd they get the horses upstairs," asks Raymond, a local roofer.

Part of the crowd

The atmosphere is warm and friendly. The patrons know one another and the talk swings playfully between reminiscence and good-hearted abuse. Every so often the door swings open and another customer asks Sis for a beer.

Some she slaps on the back, others she plunks down at a table and nearly everybody receives the same, friendly treatment. Even newcomers are soon a part of the crowd as Sis makes it her business to know their's and ensures they tell everyone else. Once a man's intentions and deeply held beliefs have been explained, he's accepted and invited to contribute to whatever talk there is.

That's how Danny the fugitive from the Iroquois first started coming to the Dominion. "He stuck his head in the door," explains Sis, "and asked for a room. I didn't have the heart to refuse."

He's been coming up from Toronto ever since - once every few weeks and only for a night at a time. A slim man, in his late 40's with distant eyes, Danny says he likes the Dominion because of the friendly people. "I've travelled hundreds of thousands of miles, all across Canada and the world. There's no bars like building," she explains) he'll take part in any entertainment that's going.

He got off the bus from the city early this evening and he'll catch the first one back tomorrow morning.

Les McKnight, known by his friends as Chipper, says

"No bar like this anywhere else"

But until he goes up to his room for the night (Sis has confiscated his cigarettes and matches - "I don't want him smoking in my

he comes to the Dominion because of the respectable conversation. "People here don't curse and they don't like it when other people curse. That's what I like about it." With his bright red jacket and polished brown boots, Chipper is often, himself, the centre of talk.

How does he keep his boots so nice folks ask. And what about that fine crease in the trousers - how does he keep that, they want to know. But Chipper just smiles. His secrets may never be known.

Suddenly the door bangs open again and a baseball team tumbles in. The room is filled with boisterous talk as everyone sits down for a beer.

No one knows for sure when the Dominion first appeared; like man himself, the origins of the place are shrouded in mystery. Nila Reynolds in her book on county history, In Quest Of Yesterday, suggests that it may have been built by a man by the name of Charles Boswell. Boswell bought the original Crown grant on which the building stands, Reynolds says. But a fire in 1890 "destroyed a hotel on the Anson side of the street, owned by Mr. Cardwell." She asks: "Was this the Dominion House?"

Anson, Hindon and Minden Councillor Verne Graham says "No." "My grandfather owned the Dominion for two years back then and it was not burned in the fire." The building survived the blaze, but the Grahams sold it shortly afterwards, because, says the Minden Councillor, with young children about to enter the scene, they decided a different business would provide a more appropriate atmosphere for raising a family.

Old photographs of the hotel also attest to the fact, the years have left it little changed.

Logging crews

Many people still remember the Dominion as a popular rest over with the logging crews when that business still flourished in Haliburton County. The Gull River team frequently rented out the entire top floor of the establishment and filled it with beds.

Also interesting to note, Reynolds explains in her history, that when Minden Township voted in the Liquor Plebiscite, to stay dry, Anson and the Dominion remained wet. There being hotels on both sides of the street at the time, that caused a bit of a problem. Eventually special dispensation was given to the Minden Village hotels so they wouldn't suffer from

from the chamber

by Shawn Hagerman

On March 1st, 1986, the Ontario Family Law Reform Act became law. The effect in many ways of this act is to overturn over 400 years of legal precedent. It was drafted for the very best of intentions, as a piece of legislation and it may take years for the courts to interpret and clarify various aspects. However, its effect upon everyone who is living in Ontario and especially our Chamber members who are in business is far reaching and profound.

The events which may terminate a marriage and require under the act equalization of net family property of spouses are irreconcilable separation, divorce, annulment, death or the application by one spouse to the court for division because the other has improvidently depleted family property. This, as you may understand, is a very complicated piece of legislation and I in no way wish to interpret it, however, I am familiar with it being a Chartered Life Underwriter. For those in business and especially those in partnership with other people, I strongly suggest that you seek legal advice immediately and review any outstanding agreements with regard to partnership and buy-sell agreements.

This is especially true in terms of partnership agreements. The current piece of legislation supersedes these agreements. However, a marriage contract may be drafted to cover such situations. Again caution and legal advice is needed since the current legal opinion is that married couples should seek separate and independent legal advice when it comes to drawing up the terms of their marriage contract. When this procedure is not followed and if it can later be shown that one spouse was not fully aware of the implications of the document he or she was signing, the contract and/or related business agreement concerning a partnership may be invalid. This new act has far reaching and profound implications for anyone in business or currently contemplating starting a business. This, right now may be a good time to sit down and review your situation with your lawyer.

Mates found, each pair will fly to fantastic heights (planes have been splattered as much as 2 km up) where each pair mate.

Returning to the ground, the male dies. The future queens rub off their wings against rocks or other hard objects, and search out a tiny cavity, in the soil or log beneath a rock, where she will wall herself off till spring. Here she will wait for her eggs to begin developing, hibernating through the winter, and living by converting the flight muscles back into body food.

Next spring, she'll begin laying eggs. The first dozen or two, she'll have to tend. But from that point on, her workers will take over all the other tasks, leaving the queen to do nothing but lay eggs to build the colony.

across from Hillcrest Lodge at Halls Lake and Jack and I learned much from him of an evening just sitting there and listening to his early days.

We left Hillcrest Lodge when Laura and Bill Mole opened Lorealea Lodge and became fast friends. Every holiday weekend and vacations we were there and the week before Christmas each year we were their guests as that was the only time they were closed and could go places with us.

To look back on such wonderful times when one is aging is so fulfilling, and I must say when the good Lord created Haliburton area, it was a dream come true, especially with the glory of the colours in the Fall.

When I first started going to Haliburton it used to take us all day to get to Halls Lake - leaving at 6:30 a.m. and getting there around 4:00 p.m. We travelled on trails with ruts, where, if you saw another car approaching, you either pulled over as far as possible or backed up. I know my Mother and I were sick for the balance of the day and used to have to go and lie down.

My father, uncle and I used to go out fishing in Halls Lake nearly every morning about 6:00 a.m. and it was no time before we would be bringing in 3 or 4 lake salmon trout around 5 lbs. for our breakfast. This is no "fish story" - it is the truth.

Who could forget Bill Gartshore's snack bar - "Algar". We visited there after our dances (all of us) and went into the early morning hours dancing to the juke box. We helped cook hot dogs and hamburgers and had a wonderful time.

Sorry for taking up your valuable time, but when we get started memories come spilling out and time is forgotten.

(Mrs.) Aileen Stirling,
Scarborough, Ont.

Editor:

Summer 1986 is pretty well over here in our beautiful Haliburton Highlands and I would be most remiss if I did not offer a vote of thanks to all the business and non business people who were so helpful and pleasant to me and to the staff of Camp Towhee this summer.

We were located in temporary quarters at Camp Kandalore for six weeks with our special children, and most everyone involved went out of their way to help. We normally would use services in Haliburton Village since our camp is close by, but this year was a very different year for us. Being located on the Highway 35 corridor, we used the services of various locations from Dorset to Metro Carnarvon to Minden.

So, a big thank you is extended to all those with whom we had contact this summer. A special thank you to Dr. Jeff, Dr. Pizzuto and their staff and also the Minden Hospital staff for looking after our medical needs so cheerfully and adequately.

We are in the process of re-building Camp Towhee and had a group of Learning Disabled adolescents and their leaders stay there for a period of one week in late August. This event was made possible by much hard work on the part of local workers to make the site safe for their use.

The children and adolescents we serve at Camp Towhee are learning disabled and contact with them over the past four years has certainly enriched my life. I have also been associated with our local chapter of O.A.C.A.L.D. since its inception in 1978 and am still learning from these special people.

Yvonne M. Penney,
Bus. Mgr. Camp Towhee.

unfair competition.

But that's all history. The Dominion has gone through innumerable renovations and additions since then and all that remains of the loggers are the initials they carved in the door of their third floor room. Few people now remember much about the history of what is surely, a Minden institution.

Though the people have forgotten, the building hasn't. Unlike most bars built in the last fifty years, the place has character. Take a step inside and you can feel its age. By the shadows that hang unnaturally in the corners and by the comfortably worn tables that seem to invite confidences, you'll know you'll not be the first to call for a beer, or to tell those assembled your life's story.

Conversation has now shifted to the subject of the benches that sit in front of the hotel. Sis says she doesn't know how they got there, but she's sure it's the municipality's job to see they're painted.

"I believe," says Raymond, "the last fellow who owned the Dominion took those benches with him."

Art Austin rouses himself. "Yes, he did. And I helped to buy them back so they could be returned to their rightful place. So the people could have a place to sit down."

Benches out front, the second floor porch across the front, loggers on the third floor, tall tales and friendly banter. The Dominion is a Minden institution that endures.

Sis, left, has been serving Alice and Raymond and hundreds of other loyal patrons for as long as she has worked at the Dominion.

Recently the provincial government passed a law which enabled property owners to apply to purchase adjacent shoreline allowance. Although rights to such land and ownership is still a legal grey area, municipalities are under some obligation to sell the shoreline allowance when the applicant meets the requirements.

"So far," said Councillor Verne Graham, "I'm not aware of a case in which a municipality has refused to sell to a proper applicant."

Mr. Graham stressed that the recent sale of the Pine Point marine allowance would not prevent people from swimming in the area. "There's still plenty of shoreline on either side of the point, and as long as they stay below the high water mark (at Pine Point), they're free to swim there as well."

New job funding

- by Bill Scott, MP -

I have been advised by the Minister of Employment and Immigration that he will soon release funds for further projects under the Job Development Program.

New application kits should be available in all Canada Employment and Immigration Commission (CEIC) offices by September 8, 1986. CEIC offices will accept applications for funding until October 16, 1986. The final assessment of all proposals will be made after October 17. I understand these new funds will be rather limited so I suggest that applications should be well prepared and submitted as soon as possible.

The Job Development Program is one of the key elements of the Canadian Jobs Strategy. It focuses on individual needs and improved long-term employment prospects in the context of local economic growth and potential. The goal of Job Development is to create a skilled work force, not to create make-work projects.

Job Development encourages flexible and innovative projects. Project sponsors can include municipalities, the non-profit sector, community groups and the local business community. Projects can be tailored to the individual needs of clients, in line with provincial programming and private sector requirements.

Job Development is the first comprehensive program to meet the training and employment readiness needs of the long-term unemployed, ranging from the most severely disadvantaged to those who are job ready but who lack opportunities.

Eligible project sponsors in the private sector can receive wage subsidies and direct financial contributions toward capital costs and training. Those who require special equipment or structural renovations to the workplace to hire disabled persons can receive up to $10,000 to defray these costs.

To cover direct training costs, sponsors could receive $40 per day per client. The Job Development program may also pay for the costs of hiring a project manager. In the case of the non-profit sector, Job Development may cover up to 100 per cent of total project costs.

The program benefits people who have been unemployed for 24 out of the previous 30 weeks, including the employment-disadvantaged, women, disabled persons, Native people and visible minorities.

Volunteers help meet the needs of seniors

by Jim Wilkinson

As school commences for another year and your children are out of the home, have you ever thought of being a volunteer for two or three hours a week?

Our community organizations are in constant need of volunteers. The Haliburton County Information Centre is operating a Volunteer Registry to match the skills and interests of individuals to the organization that will most benefit.

I have been a volunteer for several years at the Haliburton County Information Centre and find it a very fulfilling experience. Also, as a former teacher, I do several hours a week as a tutor to poor readers.

You need not worry about what you can do, the training is up to the organization and they will be encouraged by your interest. Your help is needed. Give us a call and tell us about yourself and we'll investigate the most valuable location for your help.

Call us at 457-2733 or drop in and talk it over.

SPECIALTY FITNESS CLASSES BEGIN IN OCTOBER

With grins, or perhaps grimaces, third place finishers in the C2 class, Riddell and Rivers, thread their way down the Gull River course Sunday afternoon. The two were among the many keen competitors to take part in the annual Open Canoe Slalom.

Canoeists compete at Wild Water Preserve

For the second time in two weeks, the Minden Wild Water Preserve was the site of another slalom race. However, unlike the Pan Am event at the end of August, the Gull River Open Canoe Slalom over the weekend was not a high profile race.

"We deliberately tried to make it very low key, so that no one would feel intimidated," said race organizer Fred Loosemore. "The idea is to make people feel at ease so they don't worry about competing."

Organized by the Toronto Canoe Club Trail Blazers, the race attracted 36 entries in five different classes. All competitors used open canoes between 16 and 18 feet in length.

"Basically," explained Loosemore, "these people are canoe trippers, rather than keen racers. Most of their experience is from travelling down rivers and other types of recreational paddling."

The Gull River Race, he said, is one of three big open canoe competitions in Ontario. There is no international race in the sport.

Loosemore stressed that last weekend's race was not for beginners. "This is the hardest event we paddle in by far. The people here have had considerable experience and they know what they're doing."

"And the level of skill is improving. It used to be when the race first started a few years ago, that by the halfway point, at least seven or eight boats had been mangled. This time, only one boat has been banged up."

Loosemore said the two other major open canoe races in this province are on the Credit River in Toronto during the spring and in the Madawaska River close to Bancroft, in early August.

Competitors in the Gull River race had to pass through 15 gates that hung just over the surface of the river. Loosemore explained that the rapids are more difficult for open canoes than for kayaks and covered canoes. "That's why we use a different, slightly easier course with fewer gates."

Loosemore said he liked coming to the Gull River race particularly because of the excellent facilities at the Wild Water Preserve. "The camping area is great. In a lot of races, there's just nowhere to pitch a tent at night."

First in the two-man canoe class were Brugmans and Campitelli. Second place was taken by Barrs and Winfield and third were Riddell and Rivers.

In the junior men's two-man canoe class, Nixon and Weir came first. Ruddock and Craig were second and Gumble and Botterell placed third.

The mixed two-man canoe event was won by Tennant and Riddell. Second were Pham and Grater, and third were Barsevskis and Nehr.

Manning and Grater placed first in the two-man canoe women's event. Second were Horne and Kerr, and third Tennant and Hale.

First in the single men's canoe class was Sagerman. Campitelli took second, and Rhude placed third.

Trepidation and consternation play across the faces of two paddlers as they head into another gate in the Open Canoe Slalom competition Sunday afternoon. These two participants, Tennant and Hale, placed third in the women's pairs event.

Fox bait contains rabies vaccine

The Ontario Ministry of Natural Resources will begin immunizing wild foxes with a new vaccine this September, as part of an ongoing strategy to control the spread of rabies in rural areas.

Ministry aircraft will drop 15,300 baits - liver and hamburger coated sponge cakes containing a strengthened, liquid rabies vaccine - in an area surrounded by the townships of Hullet, Goderich, Stanley, Colborne and Tuckersmith, near the towns of Goderich and Clinton.

The area - which has been used in similar trials for the last two years - will be expanded this year to include McKillop township near the town of Seaforth.

"We have done two previous field tests," said

Natural Resources Minister Vincent Kerrio. "One test examined this method of delivering the baits without using the vaccine. It showed that the method works - two out of three foxes will eat the baits."

"Vaccine was used in the second test, but fox blood samples indicated that it was not as effective as we anticipated. Rabies immune antibodies were present in about five per cent of the foxes. That is why we must try for better results this year with this stronger, longer-lasting vaccine."

The new vaccine, developed at Connaught Laboratories in Toronto, is similar to a vaccine which has been field-tested with success in Europe. It has shown 100 per cent potential in laboratory tests and is expected to effectively retain its potency three weeks after it is dropped.

This is significantly better than last year's vaccine which retained its potency for only three days after it was dropped, and was estimated to be 80 per cent effective in producing rabies immune antibodies.

The vaccine used in this year's trial will distribute around the mouth of the fox as it chews the sponge and then be absorbed into its blood system. The sponge will be smeared with liver and packaged with liver and packed with hamburger to emit a pungent odor to attract the animals faster.

"Local trappers will once again play an important role in this operation," Mr. Kerrio said. "The bait drop has been timed to coincide with fox-trapping season - about mid-October and mid-November - so that we can examine the fox blood samples local trappers collect and determine how effective the new vaccine has been."

The vaccine has proven safe in the laboratory should accident contact occur with pets or humans. It should not, however, be considered an adequate immunizing agent if one of the baits is eaten by a pet.

The sponge smeared with liver will be placed in a plastic bag with the hamburger. The plastic bait bags are clearly marked with a warning label. Residents are being asked not to touch them. The baits will be dropped away from human habitation - on gravel pits, fields and along the edges of woodlands.

Head lice problems continue

Some schools in the county are experiencing a problem with head lice.

"In most places it's not as bad as it has been in other years," says Stuart Baker, the director of education in Haliburton County, "but it's too early to tell yet."

Less than a hand full of instances of head lice have been discovered at Archie Stouffer Elementary School in Minden but at Wilberforce Public School, says principal Charles Hughes, "It's as bad as I've seen it in 25 years."

Mr. Hughes says he thinks the school is getting on top of the problem.

Head lice outbreaks often in schools because of the proximity of large numbers of children and the general sharing of hats and scarves.

Mr. Baker explains that, "It can go unnoticed for some time and in the early stages itching is not necessarily a symptom. The only way to prevent it is through regular inspection and the use of medicated shampoo."

Another reason head lice could become a problem this year is that health officials in Ontario are not treating the condition. "It's a nuisance rather than a disease," says supervisor of public health nursing for Victoria and Haliburton Counties Carol Aird. "Head lice are not a health problem; and they don't carry bacteria," she adds.

The Ministry of Health issued a policy statement a year ago this September that health officials would not treat head lice.

Mrs. Aird explains that the decision was made because of other more important demands being made on the health services. She cites immunization programs and teaching work that some nurses do in schools as an example.

She does say however, that health officials will help parents and teachers to deal with head lice outbreaks by explaining how the problem can be treated or prevented.

Principal Hughes of the Wilberforce Public School says he's not particularly pleased with the Ministry's response to the problem. "Health officials used to treat the problem. It just means now that in many cases the teachers inherit it. And it certainly is not an educational problem."

Committee ponders municipal election changes

Municipal Affairs Minister Bernard Grandmaitre recently released Issues and Options: An Interim Report on Municipal Elections in Ontario.

Speaking before the Annual Conference of the Association of Municipalities of Ontario, Mr. Grandmaitre told delegates that the Advisory Committee on Municipal Elections has extensively reviewed the municipal electoral process; current practices and procedures; and existing legislation covering municipal and school board elections.

The committee, chaired by Gerald Parisien and Anne Johnston, reviewed more than 200 submissions from associations, other groups and individuals.

Mr. Grandmaitre highlighted a number of the committee's recommendations. Among them:

The committee recommends that polling day be changed from the second Monday in November every third year to the third Tuesday of October. (Note: The third week of October would afford better weather conditions than November and harvesting is generally completed by this time. Tuesday would allow the municipal clerks a working day, the day before polling day.)

The committee proposes that contributions to municipal election campaigns be eligible for tax deduction, and that the costs of such deductions be borne by participating school boards and municipalities. (Note: There is no provision at the present time in the legislation to permit any form of tax credit to be given to contributors to municipal election campaigns. Both the federal and provincial governments provide tax credits for campaign donations, funded by their respective income tax revenues.)

The committee recommends a deposit and an increase in the number of electors signing nomination papers for candidates, with full refunds of deposits for candidates who receive at least 20 per cent of the total votes cast. (Note: The legislation currently provides that a minimum of ten electors' signatures are required on any candidate's nomination papers. There is no deposit requirement at the present time.)

The committee proposes that all candidates be required to disclose their election contributions and expenses, and that limits be placed on the amount of contribution to any one candidate and to all candidates by any one contributor. (Note: Disclosure of candidates' campaign contributions and expenses is, at present, at the discretion of the municipal council. The enabling legislation (section 121 of the Municipal Elections Act) does not apply to school boards or public utilities' commissions).

The committee recommends that campaign expenses be limited according to a formula based upon the number of electors. (Note: The current legislation does not set limits to campaign expenses.)

"I am pleased with this interim report and its recommendations, and hope it generates more discussion on how we can improve the system," said Mr. Grandmaitre.

"The committee will now circulate the report with a request for comments and suggestions by October 1, 1986. I want to get the widest possible input before we undertake election reform," he said.

He said he expects the final report to be released in November.

Teachers contract approved

Elementary teachers in Haliburton County will receive an across-the-board pay increase of 4.1 per cent for the 1986-87 school year. The school board agreed to the rise at the end of June during negotiations that began in early May.

"It's a very routine agreement," says Stuart Baker, the director of education for the county. "We discuss pay with the teachers every year, and we'll be doing it again next year when this agreement runs out."

The negotiations went smoothly, Mr. Baker says.

"The pay increase is to cover the rise in the cost of living," he explained.

Trent Severn News

On Tuesday, September 2 the Haliburton Lakes of the Trent-Severn Waterway stood at 63.9% of the average normal maximum level. This was down 4.2% from August 25 or about .05% per day. The 10 year average for the date is about 60.5%.

Heavy rain fell over Balsam and Cameron Lakes the night of September 4 - 5 which gave a surplus to the upper Kawarthas. Recorded amounts in excess of 60 mm caused these lakes to rise 5 to 8 cm. Higher flows from the Kawarthas were then set so the Otonabee was running about 45 metres (3) s today (September 5), to keep ahead of this inflow. Normal September flow is 36.1 m(3) s.

In general the lakes are holding near average for the time of year in both the Severn and Trent watersheds, but the river flows are running about 1.5 to 2 times normal due to the wetness.

A green darner visits

- Federation of Ontario Naturalists -

A green darner dropped in to spend a night with us last week. Attracted by a fluorescent light, she flew in an open window to perch on a mirror frame. It was the first truly close look I'd had at what has to be one of Ontario's most gorgeous creatures.

But what's a green darner? Seriously - a finger-length dragonfly.

It's iridescent emerald-green 'body' grades to bright turquoise at the back. Projecting behind is a long, two-tone abdomen of vivid purple; dark violet above, fuschia below, meeting in an intricate pattern. Four finger-length wings are of clear, reflective cellophane, divided into hundreds of little lites by light brown veins. They're reminiscent of leaded windows in the play of light. Six long, jet-black legs splay beneath, like a space vehicle's landing legs.

The perfect condition and phosphorescent quality revealed that she had just crossed the magical transformation from nymph to adult.

Throughout their life, dragonflies are basically living machines designed for one purpose - eating pest insects.

The eggs of the darner - laid in large water bodies in late summer - hatch quickly. From each emerges a creature so antithetical to the adult as to defy belief. Out comes a squat, flattened 'bug', drab brown, that for all the world resembles a piece of debris. It immediately makes for the bottom, where it blends with the muck and plant-bits, its body often coated with a moss-like algae. Silently, it ponderously stalks the bottom in slow motion, holding in front a mask - a great rolled up lower lip which hides ferocious, mechano-like mouth parts. It breathes through its anus, and rocket-propels itself toward unsuspecting prey by exhaling. In a split-second, the toothed lip flips down and out one third the nymph's length, and seizes the prey which is promptly torn limb from limb and devoured. Indeed, such dragonflies are among the main reason that lakes and healthy ponds, produce few mosquitoes.

The following summer, the adult darners make their appearance. One night, cued by warm water, and perhaps also shortening days, they labourously crawl from the water onto vertical rocks, docks and plants, where they lock their legs into the surface. Then, each begins a transformation more dramatic than caterpillar to butterfly. For, the dragonfly skips this resting stage. Within an hour, the back splits, and out from the old 'skin' arches a critter in completely different shape.

Built for flight, it is long and graceful. Its lanky legs are built not only for landing, but also to form a basket which nets insects in flight. Stubby little scales have been transformed into graceful wings, giving the darner 20 - 30 km speeds, unsurpassed agility and hovering ability. The same compound eyes are there - made up of hundreds of individual eyelets that see in every direction at once.

Within hours, their wings are pumped out, dry and hardened. Without training, each knows instinctively how to use and coordinate all those new parts. By mid-day, they're on the wing, in ravenous search of mosquitoes, moths and other flying insects.

Next time you see a green darner, give it my thanks. And have a close look - if you can.

Friendship

Friendship is something one feels for another Based on trust and sincerity.

There are the good times and the bad But always, a friend stands by the person he Respects, and believes.

Not like Iago in Othello with his famous And insignificant but lethal Fazzoletto.

It only took a handkerchief to change

The lives of Othello and Desdemona

From love, to hate and murder!

Because of uncertainty and distrust.

A friend is one, who in spite of what he may hear Stands side by side

In joy and adversity.

Someone who will trust, until the end

His friend.

Shakespeare and Verdi were very astute men.

They understood the workings of the mind.

It is so easy to judge the frailties of man -

His accomplishments and his weaknesses.

But a friend - never!

In Don Carlo, Roderigo was willing to lay down his life

For his friend, Don Carlo, and he did -

This is what friendship means.

The bible teaches us

There is no greater love in this world to give

Than to lay down one's life for a friend.

Friendships are hard to come by

Even if only one

Do not destroy it!

Hi Kids!!

Here is another puzzle for you with a word list. Look in the diagram of letters for the words given in the list. Find them by reading up, down, forward, backward and diagonally. They are all in a straight line and do not skip letters. Circle the words in the diagram and cross it off in the list.

It's as easy as that. Have fun!

Q: What happened to the man who discovered electricity?

Q: What is the definition of defeat?

Roadside colour

The frosts of the past week have dealt a serious blow to the number and variety of roadside flowers, but nonetheless, the Highlands' byways continue to have a colourful edging. The leaves of the deciduous trees have started their annual change of colour and such hardy flowering plants as Black-eyed Susans and Goldenrod continue to delight the eye, if not tickle the nose of the unfortunate hay-fever sufferer. Among those plants which can withstand the first few frosty nights, is the Common St. John's Wort (Hypericum perforatum). The plant is a member of the St. John's-Wort family (some reference books spell it St. Johnswort), which include such variations as Great, Shrubby, Spotted, Coppery, Pale, Dwarf and Canadian. First brought from Europe to Pennsylvania in the late 1700's, the plant rapidly spread throughout North America. In some areas, its presence is not appreciated since ingestion by livestock can result in sickness. The yellow flowers are a little more than half an inch across with a showing display of bushy stamens in the centre. The small shiny leaves are spotted. Interestingly, the spots are transparent when held up to the light. The petals of the flower also contain spots along their edges. So, as the summer slowly slides into autumn, a few stalwart plants continue to flaunt their colour. Enjoy them while you can.

Successful summer for useful Agri-crews

When the grain is being harvested, you know that the summer will soon be over, and so will the Agri-crew Program. The crews finished their work terms on August 18th, and on the whole, the summer was a tremendous success.

Thirty-one farmers utilized the services of the crews, and they were not only restricted to work in the Lindsay area. The crews worked near Haliburton, Cannington, Bobcaygeon, Omeme and Pontypool, and they had many different and interesting jobs; including cleaning out sheep pens, setting up for a fair, and applying Roundup to milkweed.

The crews worked steadily throughout the summer, as interest in hiring the crews was high. Even during the wet weather of a few weeks ago, there was a great deal of alternate work. On the whole, the summer was very successful.

At this point, on behalf of the crews and myself, I would like to thank the farming community for its support of the Agricrew Program. The farmers of this area deserve congratulations as they determine the success of the Program.

Keep this Program in mind in 1987 when you have some odd jobs to be done.

Victoria 4-H

"Reach for the Top"

Thirty-two Victoria County 4-H members matched wits and came up with answers in split seconds during the "Reach for the Top" competition held on Tuesday, August 19, in Lindsay. The club teams of four members each competed in four preliminary games with the four highest scoring clubs advancing to the semi-final games. Scores of 290 and 205 respectively put Fenelon Beef and Omeme Field Crops in the final game, these teams defeating Omeme Beef and Victoria Sheep.

During the final game, Duane Webster, Irwin Potter, Stephanie Tucker and Shannon McMillan of Fenelon 4-H Beef Club scored 305 points and became the Victoria County "Reach for the Top" champions. The reserve champions from the Omeme Field Crops Club were Larry Bowen, Blair Rodman, Derek Ruth and Jennifer Schroter, with a score of 210 points.

All questions for the competition were based on general 4-H knowledge, as well as agricultural and homemaking information.

Presentations to the champions and reserve champions included silver dollars and medallions. Victoria County Holstein Association donated silver dollars and Shirley King, Chairman of Victoria County 4-H Leaders' Association, presented the medallions. The program was run by the volunteer 4-H leaders in Victoria County who adjudicated, scored and timed the games, among other duties.

An all-star team of four members will be chosen to represent Victoria County at the Provincial Competition in Ridgeway on October 25, 1986. Congratulations to all our competitors and thank you to our leaders for a successful evening!

Agricultural report

The Ontario Farm Management Analysis Project has been in existence for forty years. It is a co-operative project between the Ministry of Agriculture & Food and the Agricultural Economics Department at the University of Guelph.

For forty years this project has aided farm managers in evaluating the performance and financial strength of their farms. It forms a basis for evaluating where their business has been, and for projecting where the business is going.

The Farm Management Analysis Project provides individual participants with a report which includes an Income Statement, a Balance Sheet and a detailed analysis of each enterprise involved in that farm operation. About 35 Victoria County farmers participated with us in this project this year, submitting the '85 information on their farms last spring, and getting their individual reports back by early June.

The individual reports from hundreds of farms across Ontario have now been averaged by major enterprise. The resultant printed report is now available to farmers generally across the Province. It provides guidelines for standards of performance, so that an individual farmer can compare his/her own actual performance against the performance of other farms with that same type of enterprise.

Copies of the Ontario Farm Management Analysis Project report are now available from your County Agricultural Office. It could be of valuable assistance in making better decisions in your farm's operation.

Beef stabilization payment

Beef cattle producers who have joined the Tripartite Stabilization Program for slaughter cattle will be pleased to learn there is a stabilization payment coming for the second quarter of 1986.

This payment will be $13.20 per head, for slaughter cattle marketed between April 1st and June 30th.

The support price for the quarter was $74.37 per cwt., and the national average market price was only $70.10 per cwt. The payment of $13.20 per head was the maximum amount established by the Stabilization Committee for the second quarter, for slaughter cattle, and represents the premium of $6.60 from each of the federal and provincial governments. Producers did not start paying premiums until the third quarter.

Over 5000 beef producers in Ontario, Alberta and P.E.I. enrolled in the Tripartite Slaughter Cattle Plan, and are eligible for this payment. They represent well over half the slaughter cattle produced in these provinces.

The necessary forms to obtain this payment will be mailed directly to participating farmers in Ontario from the Stabilization Office in Toronto.
